

Foraying into steadily rising sectors

Allied Healthcare Sector

'HOME HEALTHCARE'

is the buzzword in the present healthcare ecosystem of India. This includes the services of professional nurses and physiotherapists at home and care givers catering to aged people

65% of unnecessary hospital visits will be reduced with the help of home healthcare. This will also ensure optimum utilization of hospital beds

The Ministry of Health and Family Welfare has launched the Allied and Healthcare Professionals database portal. It is a robust data repository of healthcare workers who can be mapped adequately to different programs and opportunities

Technology-enabled healthcare is poised to make the sector more efficient

Rural healthcare improves with market penetration by global players

Need of the hour

As government has geared up to regulate the sector and standardise costs on services, it is essential to motivate youth to join the sector and provide quality service on par with international standards. Rural youth, too, need training and hand-holding to be a part of the healthcare revolution in remote parts of India.

LabourNet's Impact

450+

 Livelihoods Impacted

- With increase in demand for allied healthcare professionals throughout India, LabourNet has started catering to the sector by skilling the youth in aspirational job roles
- Youth trained as bedside assistants are exhibiting their professional prowess in hospitals and clinics across the country
- LabourNet fuels rural entrepreneurship by training the youth in optometry and assisting the young refractionists to open optical stores in remote parts that have very little or no access to quality eye care services
